Application Deadline 9/12/2022 3:00:00 PM Eastern Time Zone

Description *Applications will be reviewed on a rolling basis.

CDC Office and Location: A fellowship opportunity is currently available in the Division of Foodborne, Waterborne, and Environmental Diseases (DFWED) of the National Center for Emerging and Zoonotic Infectious Diseases (NCEZID) at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) located in Atlanta, Georgia.

NCEZID aims to protect public health caused by a wide range of infectious diseases, focusing on diseases that have been around many years, emerging diseases, and zoonotic diseases. Part of this focus on infectious disease transmission involves behavioral health investigations of the interactions between hygiene and health to prevent and control waterborne disease outbreaks.

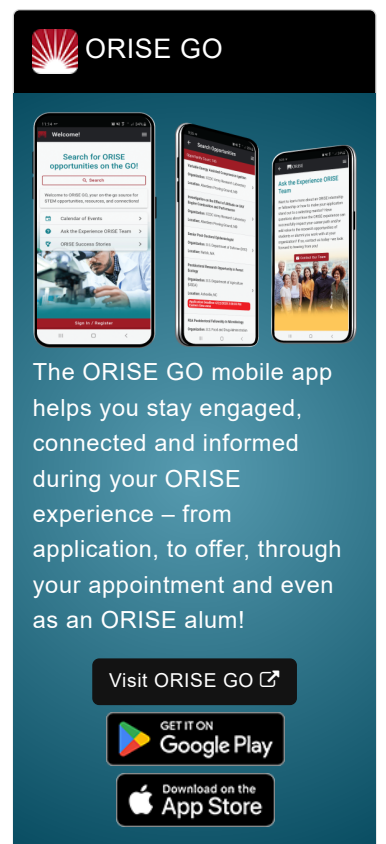

Research Project: The selected participant will collaborate with a multi-disciplinary team in the Waterborne Disease Prevention Branch to provide scientific and analytical support for behavioral science research in the area of waterborne disease prevention. Activities will include:

- Coordinating with research teams to collect, analyze, and publish findings of both quantitative and qualitative research in peer-reviewed journals
- Providing analytic support to WDPB for quantitative projects
- Drafting program status reports, developing funding proposals, and presenting to program funders and other key stakeholders
- Engaging with new and existing partners to expand reach and identify opportunities for collaboration on waterborne disease prevention
- Translating research methodologies and results for lay audiences

Learning Objectives: The learning objectives for the ORISE fellow will include:

OAK RIDGE INSTITUTE
