Description The US Army Research Institute of Environmental Medicine (USARIEM) is an internationally recognized center of excellence for Warfighter health and performance. Our research studies are conducted by scientists from our four research divisions, working in concert with one another, as well as other world-class scientists from government, industry and academia. The Military Performance Division of USARIEM conducts research to enhance the performance (physical, cognitive, behavioral and psychomotor) of military occupational tasks, or to prevent performance decrements due to physical overload, nutritional imbalances, environmental and operational stresses, and musculoskeletal injuries.

The participant(s) will assist with evaluating the influence of early access to musculoskeletal (MSK) injury expertise and targeted education & training to reduce injury rates as part of a large multi-faceted research study. Through participation in this research appointment, participants will have the opportunity to expand their skill sets, and to gain valuable training and experience to further their scientific development. Additionally, as part of the research, the participant(s) may:

- Assist in the collection and analyses of data
- Support Tactical Athlete Training Courses to improve the non-trauma skills of Army medics
- Assist in the conduct of physical performance and injury risk screenings
- Collaborate in supporting the project team to provide forward based MSK care to Soldiers in training and clinic-based MSK care to Soldiers
- Assist with assessing Reconditioning Physical Readiness Training (PRT) programs
- Assist in providing injury prevention education classes to Soldiers, medical providers, and leadership as appropriate
- Participate in supporting the establishing temporary treatment sites at PRT and field training events to evaluate and triage injuries
